

COVID-19 Q&A: MEDICAL SCREENINGS AND SICK EMPLOYEES

Webinar held March 19, 2020. FAQ up to date as of March 30, 2020.

Question	Answer
Are employers able to take their employees' temperatures when they are coming into the office?	The EEOC has said the following: When may an ADA-covered employer take the body temperature of employees during the COVID-19 pandemic? Generally, measuring an employee's body temperature is a medical examination. Because the CDC and state/local health authorities have acknowledged community spread of COVID-19 and issued attendant precautions, employers may measure employees' body temperature. However, employers should be aware that some people with COVID-19 do not have a fever.
If an employee has been in contact with a COVID-19 positive person, what can be shared with co-workers about their PHI to notify of a potential contact?	Employees should be notified that someone they have been in contact with has been diagnosed with COVID-19. Do not release the sick employee's name or personal information. Consult with your local health department.
Ohio Governor Dewine has 'encouraged' employers to take the temperature of each employee as they report to work and send home all workers with fever over 100.4., Are there concerns with this?	See above.
Are you saying you can give the name of an employee that has been diagnosed with COVID-19?	Employees should be notified that someone they have been in contact with has been diagnosed with COVID-19. Do not release the sick employee's name or personal information. Consult with your local health department.

If someone has a case of COVID-19, our building is asking that we notify them. Can we?	Please notify the building as requested without releasing personal information about the diagnosed person. Consult with your local health department.
Should a work related exposure be a workers' comp claim?	See response to work comp claim under FFCRA sheet.
We had an employee in a manufacturing facility who came in with a mask and said he was having respiratory issues. He did not want to go home. We sent him home anyway. He is in his 30s so from other cases we know they won't test him, even with symptoms. How risky was that?	For more information regarding COVID-19 symptoms, please go to the CDC website or the WHO website.
Can you require employees to take their temperature at work each day, and send home employees who have a temp over a certain threshold?	See above.
Are employers able to take their employees' temperatures when they are coming into the office?	See above.
Can you take employees' temperature at the door arriving to work? Can a manager who is not a medical professional take the temperatures? Are employers required to pay employees if sent home for temperature greater than 100.4? What should we require before they return? Thank you!	See above.
Is it only sick "young" people that are testing positive for COVID-19, or are healthy young people testing positive and getting sick also?	All people are susceptible. For more information regarding COVID-19 symptoms, please go to the CDC website or the WHO website.
The Response Act goes into effect 15 days after enactment. Does it go into effect April 2nd and are the coverages retroactive or going forward from April 2nd?	See answers from FFCRA sheet.
Is a company required to shut down if an employee tests positive for COVID-19?	Not currently, those who were working closely with the employee should be informed they may have been exposed.

Questions that required attorney-client privilege, required additional facts to answer, or were highly dependent on state and local laws were unable to be answered in this FAQ.

The information provided in this FAQ is not, is not intended to be, and shall not be construed to be, either the provision of legal advice or an offer to provide legal services, nor does it necessarily reflect the opinions of the agency, our lawyers or our clients. This is not legal advice. No client-lawyer relationship between you and our lawyers is or may be created by your use of this information. Rather, the content is intended as a general overview of the subject matter covered. This agency and Marathas Barrow Weatherhead Lent LLP are not obligated to provide updates on the information presented herein. Those reading this alert are encouraged to seek direct counsel on legal questions.